PETER SARKISIAN'S VIDEO INSTALLATIONS

By MARIE ROMERO

For the past two years, art critics have been talking about Peter Sarkisian. In the image of the art world, Sarkisian works in a "quadri media and video production." What this basically means is that he is an artist who creates video installations that combine traditional and new media elements. His projects often involve the projection of images onto objects in an environment, creating a sense of space and time.

"Dear friend," is the title of one of Sarkisian's works. It was created in 1993 for the exhibition "The New Romantic" at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. The work consists of a large screen on which a video projection is shown, along with a series of audio recordings. The installation explores the concept of the "Dear friend," and how it relates to the idea of communication and the human body.

"Dear friend," features a series of images and sounds that create a sense of intimacy and connection. The work is accompanied by a series of audio recordings that are triggered by movement and sound. The installation is designed to be experienced by viewers who walk through the space, feeling the vibrations of the sound and the warmth of the projection.

Sarkisian's work has been exhibited in numerous galleries and museums around the world. His installations are known for their ability to create a sense of intimacy and connection, and for their ability to explore the relationship between technology and the human body.

"Dear friend," is a powerful example of how Sarkisian uses technology to create a sense of space and time. The work invites viewers to step into a world of connection and exploration, and to experience the power of technology to create a sense of intimacy and community.
PROJECTING THE FUTURE OF ART

WHEN YOU WALK IN YOU'RE SHARING SPACE WITH A MOVING, BREATHING, CHANGING ELEMENT.

‘RARE DROP’
- Four video installations by Peter Selginon
- Through March 6
- Closing reception 3 to 7:30 p.m. Friday
- Art Center 1 p.m.
- Wood Street Galleries, Downtown
- (412) 677-5605